Fiber optic cable fittings, including connectors, adapters, and couplings, are available from specialized distributors like Mouser, EFB-Elektronik, and DigiKey, offering a wide range of types and technical support.

Key Suppliers and Options

Mouser Electronics offers a broad selection of fiber optic connectors from manufacturers such as Amphenol, Broadcom, Molex, and TE Connectivity. Their inventory includes plugs, ferrules, and adapters compatible with various securing mechanisms like bayonet, screw-on, or snap-in, suitable for connecting fibers to devices like LEDs or detectors. Mouser provides datasheets, pricing, and inventory details for easy selection. EFB-Elektronik provides over 3,300 fiber optic products, including connectors, pigtails, splice boxes, and installation tools. They offer both pre-terminated cables and custom solutions, supporting single-mode (SMF) and multimode (MMF) fibers, covering OM1 to OM5 standards. Their online shop also includes patch cables, jumper cables, FTTx cables, and trunk cables, available by the meter or on drums. Technical consultation and compatibility guidance are available for network expansion or maintenance. DigiKey stocks fiber optic cables and assemblies suitable for long-distance single-mode or short-distance multimode applications. They provide connectors, ferrules, and transceivers compatible with various devices, along with detailed information on fiber type, jacket ratings, and installation requirements. Netceed and RP Photonics also offer fiber optic fittings, including fusion splicing equipment, adapters, and passive components. RP Photonics provides a buying guide to compare suppliers and select components for telecommunications, data centers, industrial lasers, and sensing applications
