

How much does a Huawei access layer switch cost

Article Overview

Huawei access layer switches typically range from approximately $300 to over $5,000 depending on model, port density, PoE capability, and advanced features.

Price Overview

Huawei offers a wide variety of access layer switches suitable for enterprise campuses, data centers, and high-density deployments. Entry-level models, such as basic gigabit switches without PoE, generally start around $300-$500. Mid-range switches with PoE+ support, higher port counts, and Layer 3 features typically fall in the $800-$2,500 range. High-end access switches, including models like the CloudEngine S5731-S series or modular switches with 10GE/40GE uplinks, PoE++, and advanced virtualization features, can exceed $5,000 per unit depending on configuration and optional modules ().

Factors Affecting Price

- Port Density and Speed: Switches with more ports or higher-speed ports (1G, 2.5G, 10G) cost more.
- PoE Budget: Models supporting PoE or PoE++ for powering devices like Wi-Fi 6 APs or IP cameras are priced higher.
- Layer 3 and Advanced Features: Routing capabilities, MPLS support, VXLAN virtualization, and IPv6 features increase cost.
- Stacking and Management: Switches with iStack or cloud management capabilities are more expensive due to enhanced scalability and simplified operations....
