

Price of German Vibration Optical Cable

Article Overview

The price of German vibration optical cables varies widely depending on specifications, quantity, and supplier, typically ranging from €5 to €50 per meter for standard fiber optic cables, with custom or industrial-grade variants costing more.

Pricing Overview

The cost of German vibration optical cables depends on several factors:

- Cable type and specifications: Standard indoor or outdoor fiber optic cables are generally less expensive, while vibration-resistant or industrial-grade cables designed for harsh environments command higher prices .
- Quantity and order size: Wholesale purchases often reduce the per-meter cost. Suppliers like Grenada and Bayka offer bulk pricing for large orders .
- Certifications and quality standards: Cables with VDE, ROHS, REACH, or CE certifications may be priced higher due to compliance with international safety and quality standards .
- Supplier and distribution channel: Authorized distributors such as Mouser Europe provide transparent pricing and datasheets, while B2B platforms like Volza and Europages allow direct negotiation with manufacturers .

Example Price Ranges

- Standard fiber optic cables: €5–€15 per meter for basic indoor or patch cables .
- Industrial or vibration-resistant optical cables: €20–€50 per meter depending on environmental resistance, connector type, and fiber count
