

Security System Equipment Distribution Box

Article Overview

A security system distribution box centralizes power management for multiple CCTV cameras or low-voltage security devices, simplifying installation and maintenance.

Overview

A security system distribution box, also known as a CCTV power supply box, is designed to provide a centralized point for powering multiple security devices such as cameras, access control systems, or audio surveillance equipment. Instead of using individual power adapters for each device, all devices connect to a single distribution box, which is typically installed near the DVR or control hub .

Key Features

- Multiple Channels/Ports: Boxes come in various sizes, such as 4, 9, 18, or more ports, allowing multiple devices to be powered simultaneously .
- Voltage and Current Ratings: Commonly 12V DC or 24V AC, with amperage ratings like 10A, 20A, or higher depending on the number of devices .
- Fuse Protection: Modern boxes use PTC auto-reset fuses to protect each output from overcurrent, preventing damage to connected devices .
- Lockable Enclosures: Many boxes feature metal enclosures with locks to prevent tampering and ensure safety .
- Ease of Installation: Devices connect via screw terminals or pigtail connectors, and the box plugs into a standard power outlet. No specialized electrician is typically re...
